NEW YORK'S ANTI-ERR CLUB

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The sight, or rather the sound, of some three hundred of New York's prominent financial, real estate and legal lights, assembling gravely in an auditorium and reciting in all seriousness the following:

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers.''
"How much wood would a woodchuck chuck, if a Woodchuck could chuck wood?''

Woodchuck could chuck wood?"

"Six slim, slick, slender saplings."
is the educational novelty of the year in the metropolis. Well-known bunkers and lawyers, whose fees are corporation size; realty auctioneers, who can charm dollars out of excited pockets, all gravely recite these well-known tongue-trippers popular with the children. These they may follow by remarking to each other: "Ba-ba, be-pe, bi-pi, bo-po, bu-pn, boo-poo, boi-poi."
And when 300 gruff voices or shrillvoiced New Yorkers who have been talking all their lives against the roar of the elevated road, the cacophony of

of the elevated road, the cacophony of

the subway, the noise of flat-wheeled trolleys, or the pandemenium of 'Change, begin their "ba-paing,'the ordinary college yell is a hillaby. And the whistles of the airbrakes in the "Sub" are pleasing in their sibilance to a little thing like this: "Thrice six thick thistle sticks thrust straight through the throbbing thrushes." This is called the "Ziss" sentence by the irrelevant.

This seemingly frivolous occupation, however, is one of the lessons in the newly established school to cure stage fright now being operated by the West Side Y. M. C. A. The official name of the institution is the "Public Speakers' club." but its purpose is to give nerve to New Yorkers who can talk a deal through like a master when they are seated in their office chairs, but who statter and stammer and say "Err, Err," between every word when they try to speak on their feet after dinner, or from a rostrum. For oddly enough or from a rostrum. For oddly enough it has been found that many men who supposedly are compendiums of courage and nerve and grit, simply cannot face an audience. Their ideas take wing their voacublaries desert them and "Err, Err" is the important feature of their speeches. The directors of the club are determined that in the vocabulary of New York there shall be no such word as "Err." Still it is realized that "To err is human."

The drill on the tongue traps is given by Grenville Kleiser, formerly professor of public speaking at Yale, to give lips and glotting practice in clear enunciation. He fistens to the progress of the "saplings" or the "thistle" as rendered by 300 voices, much as the orchestra leader studies the work of all his instruments with the object of detecting faulty execution. After the class has by practice become able to get vowels and consonants with true values, the instructor puts them on the "Gettysburg speech" and begins to insist on emphasis as well as clearness of caunciation. The members in groups of

The final stages will give individuals an opportunity to occupy the stage and recite the stirring words of others and later make mock speeches to a real and critical audience which is not at all above laughing at something funny in the speaker's attitude or delivery. In this respect, the class exactly duplicates the conditions that the prospective the conditions that the prospective Demosthenes must face when he takes the stump or faces a group of banqueters. But before he has reached this stage, Mr. Kleiser, the instructor, and the Y. M. C. A. people believe that tongue twisters and the chorus work will not the students beyond the stage.

United States is a student, and he made a trip from Philadelphia back to New York and returned by the midnight train to the Quaker City, that he would not lose a single of practice on "ba-pa" and "woodchuck" and the rest of it "woodchuck" and the rest of it. All sorts and conditions of men attend these classes in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. There is the man who wants to rise to a position in his lodge; there is the consulting lawyer, who is anxious to come out into court and jury practice; there is the political speaker, who has found that misuse of his throat in the open air is leading to complications; there is the man who wants to be able to talk at the dinner of his church club.

the conditions that the prospective Demosthenes must face when he takes the stump or faces a group of banqueters. But before he has reached this stage, Mr. Kleiser, the instructor, and the Y. M. C. A. people believe that tongue twisters and the chorus work will get the stadents beyond the stage of shaking knees and voices that go soaring up to a shrill treble through nervousness when the speaker really intended to emit a deep and convincing basso profunde noise.

The interest shown in the class has been somewhat remarkable. One of the leading advertising men in the
